
Los Angeles Report

December 2017

CONTENTS

* Project 1: Andrew Murray Vineyards, Santa Barbara

Andrew Murray Vineyards DTLO

Project Overview

The Andrew Murray Vineyards, even though relatively young with only a little less than 30 years existence, is recognized and praised for the quality of its wine, mostly Rhône varieties. They recently built a new information and tasting center, DTLO (Downtown Los Olivos), with an interior designed at a house scale to remind of a cozy residence. With this "at-home" feeling, the visitors feels relaxed and while tasting many different varieties of wines crafted by the Andrew Murray Vineyards they can imagine themselves enjoying the wine in their dining room. The design is simple and contemporary, the atmosphere friendly. With a BBQ equipment also at disposition, visitors who made a reservation can enjoy grilled meat while drinking high quality wine.

Project Details

1. High end winery and boutique
2. Location: 5249 Foxen Canyon Road, Los Olivos, CA 93441
3. Target Customer: Everyone
4. Built in: 1990
5. Website: <http://andrewmurrayvineyards.com/>

Location Map

The lounge seating set up is made of nicely aged Nappa leather with weathered steel pipe.

The shaggy carpet is made with left over of soft leather patches.

The space composition is very simple and contemporary with washed concrete slab floor and for the counter a single continuous copper sheet and modest candle looking lights.

A group tasting table was set with a lecture video available. It can also be used for corporate events and gatherings.

A medium sized patio with tables and benches were set for the visitors to enjoy Los Olivos outdoor weather while tasting wine.

On the second picture can be seen the BBQ equipment in the far right side